

The Northern Iowan Advertising Prices

Call us! 1-319-273-2157
Email us! northern-iowan@uni.edu

15 inches

WE DESIGN ADS FOR FREE!

Ad Prices:

Black and White ad prices

Ad Size	Campus
2 Columns(W) X 5 inches(H)	$49.00
3 X 7	$102.90
3 X 7.5	$110.25
5 X 7.5	$183.75
5 X 15	$367.50

Color $65 or spot(one color) $120 Full color

A Global Perspective

UNI student has unique insight on life after experiencing war in Sudan

By ASHLEY WILSON
Staff Writer

"Murder," war, "hunger" and "outrage" are most likely not words that pop into most students' minds when they think back on their childhoods.

But for University of Northern Iowa junior family services major John Olney, this scary mental picture was a reality for most of his young life.

A southern Sudan native, Olney was exposed to the civil war overraking the African country from the day he was born. The larger southern Sudan region is made up of mostly Muslim over the largely non-Muslim northern Sudan. This is the second civil war this country has seen, with the first one beginning in 1983 and the current war continuing from 1983.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus. Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries, both at UNI, and some of them have things like the orange book forms. We need to be aware of what is going on in the world around us, and not just be concerned with what is going on here in the United States."

John Olney
Junior family services major

"If I were to go back to southern Sudan today, I would not even recognize anything because it has all been destroyed," Olney said. "Although millions of people have died in this genociding a future in art the opportunity to see how success is possible, and to be inspired by the success of others."

"It's important to know what the department does to support the students in need of jobs in the world," Olney said. "It's important for current students to see that you can graduate and be successful and make really interesting work. It's important to give alumni an opportunity to share their work with current students and those that served as mentors at such an important time in their lives."

As an alumni, Olney urges all students to proactively seek it all up departmental experiences, outside exper-

Things UNI students should never do...

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

John Olney

in the world around us, and not just be concerned with what is going on here in the United States.

Olney hopes that by sharing his personal story he can help other students to realize the severity of the situation happening in the world outside of Cedar Falls.

"I am so lucky to be safe and living here in the United States, but I don't ever want to feel like I am 'batter' than anyone back home from the war."

Olney received his Associate in the Arts degree from Iowa Central Community College in 2007. Olney now cross country at Mount Mercy University before transferring to UNI this past September. He plans to graduate in May 2012 and eventually earn a master's degree in counseling.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus," Olney said. "Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries here at UNI, and some of them have things like this going on in the world around us."

Olney received his Associate in the Arts degree from Iowa Central Community College in 2007. Olney now cross country at Mount Mercy University before transferring to UNI this past September. He plans to graduate in May 2012 and eventually earn a master's degree in counseling.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus," Olney said. "Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries here at UNI, and some of them have things like this going on in the world around us."

Olney received his Associate in the Arts degree from Iowa Central Community College in 2007. Olney now cross country at Mount Mercy University before transferring to UNI this past September. He plans to graduate in May 2012 and eventually earn a master's degree in counseling.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus," Olney said. "Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries here at UNI, and some of them have things like this going on in the world around us."

Olney received his Associate in the Arts degree from Iowa Central Community College in 2007. Olney now cross country at Mount Mercy University before transferring to UNI this past September. He plans to graduate in May 2012 and eventually earn a master's degree in counseling.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus," Olney said. "Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries here at UNI, and some of them have things like this going on in the world around us."

Olney received his Associate in the Arts degree from Iowa Central Community College in 2007. Olney now cross country at Mount Mercy University before transferring to UNI this past September. He plans to graduate in May 2012 and eventually earn a master's degree in counseling.

"I want to use my story to create awareness on our campus," Olney said. "Everyone should be conscious that there are situations that come from different countries here at UNI, and some of them have things like this going on in the world around us."

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

Students to not "get into a fight as a fan."

Senior communication major Stefano Demmer suggested that students avoid "partying" on the weekends.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

When students think about their college experience, many stories imply a "never do" list.

Each student and staff member at the University of Northern Iowa probably care to never have their doors closed. Freshman elementary education major Heather Hesterman said students should never "leave their doors closed."

She also believes students should never "believe that their high school friends are the only people worth knowing." Wood explained that students need to take advantage of the chance to meet interesting people during college.

According to Tyler Terptrak, assistant manager of the Blues, the college experience can have a huge impact on a student's life.

"Students should never take for granted what they are doing right now, because it will be remembered and appreciated long after graduation day," Terptrak said. "Make this moment extraordinary!"

Senior student assistant and communicative disorders major Mary Alex Bush believes that students should never miss out on great opportunities. She suggests that students get involved in clubs and meet new people.

English language and literature instructor Corinne Hultsch-Farman revealed a memorable "never do" moment, telling students to "never leave (their) cell phone on in class (because) the professor might read your texts."

"Miss," "miss," a science terminology major, advised

MTM
www.mtm-music.com

SPOTLIGHT
Become a Fan on Facebook!
Content Promotions Discussions More!

Column Inches: (See picture)

- 1 Column = 1.90 inches
- 2 Columns = 3.925 inches
- 3 Columns = 5.95 inches
- 4 Columns = 7.975 inches
- 5 Columns = 10 inches